SOVEREIGN DECLARATION CONSTITUTIONAL AND HISTORICAL POSITION OF THE SCOTTISH CROWN

YOUR MAJESTIES, YOUR EXCELLENCIES,

I transmit this Sovereign Communication in my capacity as the claimant to the ancient Crown of Scotland and as the representative of the constitutional and dynastic position set forth herein.

This communication is issued not as a request for the creation or recognition of a legal status by any external authority, but as a formal declaration of the historical, constitutional, and legal position of the Scottish Crown, supported by the legal and constitutional principles upon which this Proclamation is based.

The Kingdom of Scotland possesses an ancient and continuous constitutional identity extending through centuries of recognised statehood, law, institutions, and national tradition.

The Treaty of Union of 1707 was concluded between the two separate and sovereign Kingdoms of Scotland and England. At the time of the Union, each Kingdom possessed its own Crown, Parliament, legal system, historical institutions, and distinct constitutional identity. The personal union of the Crowns beginning in 1603 did not extinguish the separate sovereignty of either Kingdom prior to the parliamentary Union of 1707.

THE ROYAL HOUSE OF STUART

The constitutional interpretation advanced by the Scottish Crown is that the legitimacy of any political union rests upon the continuing consent, constitutional protection, and fundamental rights of the peoples forming that union.

The subsequent constitutional development of the United Kingdom, including the withdrawal of Scotland from the European Union following the 2016 referendum process, has created a profound constitutional question. Scotland voted by a clear majority to remain within the European Union, yet the resulting withdrawal applied to Scotland as part of the wider United Kingdom constitutional settlement.

The Scottish Crown therefore maintains that this development represents a fundamental constitutional grievance concerning the protection of the democratic will of the Scottish people and the continuing legitimacy of the constitutional arrangements established in 1707.

The constitutional traditions of Scotland have long recognised principles of limited government, lawful monarchy, and the relationship between Crown and people.

The Declaration of Arbroath of 1320 represents one of the most significant historical expressions of Scottish constitutional identity, particularly regarding national liberty and the relationship between the people and the Crown.

Likewise, the Claim of Right of 1689 remains a fundamental historical constitutional instrument affirming that the exercise of royal authority is subject to constitutional principles and the rule of law.

These historic constitutional foundations form part of the legal and historical basis upon which this Proclamation is founded.

Separately, the dynastic claim of the Scottish Crown rests upon the asserted continuity of the Royal House of Stuart through legitimate hereditary succession, supported by genealogical research and additional historical and scientific evidence.

The question of dynastic succession is considered according to the principles of hereditary law, historical legitimacy, and the traditions governing royal houses.

Accordingly, I formally declare and assert that, according to the constitutional principles, historical continuity, and dynastic law upon which this Proclamation is based, my claim to the Crown of Scotland represents the lawful continuation of the Scottish royal tradition.

This declaration does not seek to diminish the sovereignty or legal independence of any other State.

Rather, it places before the international community the constitutional position of the Scottish Crown and invites consideration of the historical, legal, and diplomatic questions arising from that position.

International recognition is a sovereign act exercised by each State according to its own constitutional procedures, foreign policy considerations, and interpretation of international law.

Recognition does not create historical legitimacy, nor does the absence of recognition alone determine the validity of a historical or dynastic claim.

THE ROYAL HOUSE OF STUART

The legal and constitutional principles underlying this Proclamation address:

- the constitutional history of Scotland;
- the nature and consequences of the Treaty of Union 1707;
- the principles of Scottish constitutional tradition;
- the historical role of the Scottish Crown;
- dynastic succession principles;
- relevant international legal considerations.

In accordance with the principle of sovereign equality among nations and the peaceful conduct of international relations, I hereby formally communicate the following:

1. The Scottish Crown's constitutional position that the Kingdom of Scotland possesses a continuing historical and constitutional identity deserving of consideration under principles of constitutional law, international practice, and historical continuity.
2. My formal assertion, as HM Bruce II, of my dynastic and constitutional claim to the Crown of Scotland.

I respectfully invite Governments and institutions receiving this communication to consider the historical, constitutional, and legal questions presented with the seriousness appropriate to matters concerning constitutional continuity and the heritage of nations.

The preservation of constitutional memory, lawful governance, and historical continuity remains a duty owed to future generations.

Issued under the authority of the Scottish Crown.

DECLARATION OF SCOTTISH INDEPENDENCE
2026

By Decree of His Majesty
BRUCE II R

KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE OF SCOTLAND

BRUCE · The Second ·

by the Grace of God · King of Scotland ·

Protector of the Realm · Keeper of the Ancient Flame and Defender of Freedom

SOVEREIGN PROCLAMATION OF THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND

To the people of Scotland, to the nations of the world, and to all who have sought to suppress our sacred birthright, heed this solemn proclamation of our sovereign people. We, the people of Scotland, have chosen to stand as a free nation, independent and self-determining, with a future of our own making. We have chosen to stand with honour and courage, to defend the sovereignty of this realm. The freedom of our people, the rights of our citizens, the values of our society, the future of our nation, these are the things that we have chosen to stand for. We have chosen to stand for the freedom of our people, the rights of our citizens, the values of our society, the future of our nation. We have chosen to stand for the freedom of our people, the rights of our citizens, the values of our society, the future of our nation.

I. The Restoration of Scotland's Sovereignty

We, King Bruce II, King of Scots, the rightful heir of this ancient and noble land, do solemnly declare:

- Scotland is free, sovereign, and independent from all foreign powers, no foreign monarch, no foreign parliament shall govern us.
- The will of the Scottish people, as bound in our ancient constitutional compact and defended paramount to the Crown of Right, is the basis of our governance. We shall not be bound by any laws or decrees that are not made by the people, but as guardians of our sacred sovereignty, with King Bruce II, and after him, his lawful heirs, ensuring that never again shall Scotland be subjugated. This declaration is not a plea, nor a request. It is the assertion of a truth that no power on earth can deny.

II. The Abolition of Foreign Tyranny

For too long, Scotland has laboured under the yoke of an imposed rule, its rights trampled, its voice silenced. Deceits imposed without our consent have sought to erase our nationhood. Let it be known that from this day forth, we renounce, repudiate, and abolish all such unlawful impositions, including but not limited to:

1. The Act of Union (1707): A forced and fraudulent betrayal that sought to dissolve our independent Kingdom.
2. The Acts of Union (1707): A forced and fraudulent betrayal that sought to dissolve our independent Kingdom.
3. The Royal Marriages Act (1772): A gross infringement upon Scotland's sovereign rights concerning its monarchs.
4. The Regency Acts (1917 & 1953): Imposed laws that hold no authority in Scotland.
5. The Succession to the Crown Act (2013): An arbitrary decree with no bearing upon the rightful sovereignty of this land.

All such acts and any others imposed upon Scotland without the full and rightful consent of its people, are hereby declared null, void, and abolished in perpetuity.

III. The Freedom of Scotland

Men and women of Scotland, the hour of reckoning has come! No longer shall we bow before a foreign throne or submit to those who would erase our heritage. This is the hour in which we rise as one nation, to reclaim what is ours by right and by blood. Let our voices thunder across the highlands and the lochs; Scotland is free, sovereign, and independent. We call upon every Scot, at home and abroad, to stand in unswerving defiance and pledge allegiance to this sovereign cause, under the banner of King Bruce II. Let the banners be raised and let none falter in their devotion to Scotland's independence!

IV. To the Nations of the World

To all who cherish liberty and the rights of sovereign people, we call upon you to recognize Scotland's rightful independence. We permit this to be a solemn declaration of our sovereign people, we call upon you to recognize Scotland's rightful independence. We permit this to be a solemn declaration of our sovereign people, we call upon you to recognize Scotland's rightful independence. We permit this to be a solemn declaration of our sovereign people, we call upon you to recognize Scotland's rightful independence.

V. The Declaration is Irrevocable

By the authority vested in us by blood and by birthright, by the indelible will of the Scottish people, and by the eternal spirit of Scotland itself, We, King Bruce II, King of Scots, do solemnly proclaim:

- *No foreign power shall ever again hold dominion over this land.
- *This declaration is absolute, irrevocable, and eternal.
